CODE OF ETHICS

In order, the dignity and honor of the dental profession may be upheld its standards exalted, its sphere of usefulness extended and the advancement of Dental science promoted and understand more clearly their patients and to the community at large, the following code ethics is prescribed.

It is the duty of every dentist to govern himself on accordance with underlying principles which have motivated the formulation of the code. It is not assumed that the following articles cover the whole field of dental ethics, the addition to those set forth herein. Briefly the “Golden rule” should be conscientiously applied by every member of the dental profession.

It is unprofessional for a dentist to advertise by handbills, posters, circulars, cards and signs or in newspapers or in publications calling attention to special methods of practice or claiming excellence over other practitioners or to use display advertisements of any kind. It is also unprofessional to publish reports of class or certificates in public prints. This does not exclude a practitioner, either from using professional cards of suitable size with name, titles, address and telephone number printed in modest type or having the same character of card in a newspaper at the time of commencement of practice or change of address for not more than these three insertions of time. Neither specially from merely announcing his specialty on his profession card.

It is unprofessional for the dentist to pay or accept commission on fees for professional services or radiograms or any other articles supplied to patients by pharmacists or others.

One dentist should not disparage the services of another to a patient criticism of operations that are apparently defective may be unjust through lack of knowledge of the conditions under which they were performed. But the welfare of the patient is paramount to every other consideration. Should be conserved to the most of the practitioner's ability if he finds indisputable evidence that a patient is suffering from previous faulty treatment, it is his duty to institute correct treatment at once doing it with as little comment is possible and in such a manner as to avoid reflection on his predecessor.

If a dentist is consulted in an emergency by the patient of another practitioner who is temporarily absent from his office, patient who is away from home, the duty of the dentist so consulted is to relieve the patient of any immediate disability by temporary service only and then refer the patient back to regular dentist.

When a dentist is called in consultation by fellow practitioners he should hold the discussions in the consultation as confidential and under no circumstances should he accept charge of the case without the request of the dentist who has been attending it.

It is unethical for dentists to connive at or aid in illegal by others. It is their duty to expose such persons without fear or favor.

It is unethical for dentists to give testimonials directly or indirectly concerning the supposed virtue of secret therapeutic medicines or agents or to promise radical cures by employing secret methods of treatment.

The dentist should be normally, mentally and physically clean. He should be honest in all dealings with his fellowmen as comports with the honor and dignity of a cultured and professional gentleman.

DENTISTS ACT 1948

The All India Dental Journal and IDA review provided an effective medium for the dissemination of scientific advances and stressed the need for ethical practice in the field of Dentistry.

The IDA founded in 1946 highlighted the necessity for regulating the practice of dentistry and this resulted in the enactment of the Dentist Act 1948. This proved a turning point in the history of dental education and introduced a regulated systematic practice of dentistry. The provisions of the act stipulated that the practice of dentistry without registration was a punishable offense with the intention of eliminating quackery and standardizing educational requirements. The DCI was constructed in 1949, at the central and state levels.
